Body Video

Last fall, Digital Ally released a small, wearable digital camera that allows police officers to record video, audio or photograph evidence day or night. The FirstVu Body Camera features secure internal memory with USB download and a convenient removable SD card to access evidence. Encoded AVI videos or JPEG images may easily be viewed on standard systems. It can also record a date/time stamp, marks, officer ID and event and case numbers for both video and still images.

Designed to fit in a shirt pocket, the camera is 2.7" x 4.3" x 1". It offers high-quality video (H.264 codec), Full VGA (640 x 480) and 30 frames per second. It takes 2MP Still Photos and can hold 1000 images. It has automatic IR illuminations for night-time operations. The camera itself is color and wide angle, offering 133° view. It's body is IP55 Weather Resistant.

Digital Ally's VideoManager II Back Office Software is included with a purchase of FirstVu. The software is user-friendly to allow playback, searching and retrieving video, annotating, file management and archiving. Key locked access and proprietary watermarking ensure data integrity and chain of custody. Supervisor settings and individual user passwords provide complete control.
